NEWS & info

from the pride center

“The whole point of being gay was the challenge it presented. Either you were comfortable enough with your identity to take it out into the world, or you were living a lie. Set an example of confronting prejudice instead of hiding behind a private life.”

—Harvey Milk

1978: Harvey Milk, gay San Francisco city supervisor and “Mayor of Castro Street,” and Mayor George Moscone were murdered in City Hall by former city supervisor Dan White.

When Milk died on November 27, 1978, San Francisco had become the unquestioned gay capital of the United States and the Castro, its Main Street. Milk, twice-elected city supervisor, a tireless organizer, and coalition-builder, played a pivotal role in this transformation. During his several campaigns for the San Francisco Board of Supervisors (the city council), Milk forged political alliances with conservative unions like the teamsters, gained broad support for gay rights legislation and worked hard to defeat anti-gay measures such as the Briggs Initiative, which would have barred gay men and lesbians from teaching in California public schools.

NJ Pride Celebration

Neither rain nor wind could keep us from Asbury Park for Jersey Pride’s 12th Pride Celebration on June 1! Organized annually to help promote tolerance and to further efforts to win legal rights for gay couples, the Pride Celebration draws a diverse crowd, from teenagers to senior citizens, and features a parade, musical performances, and hundreds of vendors. While past crowds have reached nearly 12,000 people, the poor weather conditions this year kept the crowd at around 3,000. Despite the weather, it was a bustling and entertaining day, with nationally renowned comedian Suzanne Westenhoffer and hit recording artist Sophie B. Hawkins taking the stage at Asbury, and numerous visitors to our PCNJ table. Many thanks to our intrepid Volunteer Coordinator, Mark Spezzafaro, who led our efforts here, and our volunteers Wendy & Wendy, Ducki, Lorraine, Darren, Arthur, and Kathy, who braved the elements, discovered further uses for duct tape and tarps, and really earned their Pride stripes!

Coffee Talk

For those of you who haven’t yet heard, Womyn’s Coffee House (WCH) will be handed over to its second generation starting this fall. The five coordinators who inaugurated the monthly social event—Mary Beth Holman, Wendy Cioffi, Lorraine Pohorley, Anita Whelan, and Peggy Baker—have retired from four diligent years of nourishing the Center. WCH has been steadily bringing sundry entertainers and speakers to us every first Saturday of the month at 7:30 PM. Featured guests have included Nicole D’Angelo, Third Law of Motion, Jen Corliss, Marilyn Galfyn, Charlene Levy, Jam and Eggs, and Kathy Cummings, who distinguished themselves as singers, musicians, comedians, and therapists. In addition to the gamut of entertainers, WCH has also organized bingo, karaoke, a summer picnic, a basketball game, and dancing at The Den.

“The purpose is to attract more women to the Center and make them aware of the various support groups geared toward women, such as Center Women’s Group, Women’s AA, and NJBIWomen,” says Lorraine Pohorley, who started as shift volunteer in July 1999 and takes tremendous pleasure in helping people.

Indeed, we have seen women’s presence at the Center progressively increase, engendering new groups such as African Asian Latina Lesbians United and Republican Lesbians. So hats off to Mary Beth, Wendy, Lorraine, Anita, and Peggy of the Womyn’s Coffee House for their spirit and dedication!

The Pride Center welcomes Jennifer Horsey as the new Women’s Coffee House Chair. To join the Coffee House Committee, contact Jennifer c/o PCNJ, or attend the Center Women’s Group which meets 2nd & 4th Wednesdays at 7:30 PM. Coffee Houses will resume in September.

Spring was concert time for PCNJ! On April 26, the New Jersey Gay Men's Chorus delighted us with songs from its recent Sing for the Cure concert and other favorites. Be sure to visit the chorus's website (www.njgmc.org) soon to learn about the upcoming 2003-2004 season. In June, we enjoyed the sweet harmonies of Olympia's Daughters, hosted by the Unitarian Universalistic Church of New Brunswick. The spiritual a cappella choir's latest recording, Big Ovaries, (yep!) will soon be available for purchase. For more information, visit www.geocities.com/olympiasdaughters. Many thanks to these talented choirs and the PCNJ event volunteers for making these special evenings possible.

One of the extraordinary features of this event is that 100% of the pledge donations raised by the riders and crew will go directly to New Jersey charities. Organizers of the Ride hope to raise over $150,000 during this year's event, with 100 riders and 100 crew participating. Last year's ride raised over $20,000, with 12 riders and 50 crew members. It was an incredible experience for all. Expenses for the ride will again be covered through corporate and private sponsorships and participant registration fees. Last year's beneficiaries were The Center in Asbury Park, Asbury Park; South Jersey AIDS Alliance, Atlantic City; Eric Johnson House, Morristown; New Jersey Women and AIDS Network, New Brunswick; and The NAMES Project Foundation, Central New Jersey Chapter, New Brunswick. All are expected to benefit from this year's effort, as are several other organizations under consideration.

The ride is actively recruiting riders, volunteers, and sponsors. For further information, contact Pat Sherman, the project's Executive Director, at 732-988-6593 or visit www.njrideforaids.org.

Promote the Vote

Continued from page 1. Elections provide our organizations with the possibility to make change both within our own communities and in the broader communities we participate in. We must be proactive, use local and national elections to vote out bigots, and vote in delegates supportive of our needs. By doing so, we ensure that those in our courts, on our school boards, city councils, county commissions, and an array of instrumental positions, truly and sincerely represent us.

Founded in 1992 by the New York Lesbian and Gay Community Center, Promote the Vote (PtV) has become the largest LGBTI voter registration program in New York and one of the largest in the United States. Since its inception, PtV has registered over 41,000 voters, collected 16,000 pledges to vote from those already registered, and reached 64,000 voters via phone banks and 750,000 voters through the mail.

By participating in PtV, The Pride Center hopes to mobilize New Jersey's vote for upcoming November legislative elections and the Presidential election in 2004. If you are not already registered, registration forms are now available at The Pride Center. The final date to register in order to participate in November 2003 elections is October 6.

To conduct other voter mobilization activities in New Jersey and have a larger impact, we need volunteers for this important project. To get involved, please call PCNJ Executive Director, Ellen Gilio, or email her at pcnjexecdir@aol.com.

Volunteer Spotlight

Getting to know Arthur Merchant, Groups Coordinator of PCNJ

“I have gotten some valuable experiences in the practice of what corporate America calls networking.”

How long have you been with PCNJ?

I've volunteered at the Center since May of 1999, so I just made four years straight—well, so to speak.

What do you do as Groups Coordinator?

I took over publishing the meeting calendar in the beginning of 2000. I quickly discovered that in addition to having fun tinkering around with Excel spreadsheets, I have a responsibility to provide support for groups and their facilitators during the various stages of their meetings. This has included guiding facilitators in filling out the meeting applications, publicizing their first meeting and events, funneling prospective members to their meetings, and brainstorming on ways to increase memberships.

What inspired you to become a volunteer?

Well, for the first four years of my coming out, I was very reliant on the different support groups and pride events to help get myself on an even keel emotionally and also find my own identity now that I was honest about myself in terms of being gay. This was in contrast to spending my teens and most of my 20s trying to fool myself into believing that my true orientation was really the result of losing my mother at a young age, confusion over my role in life, fear of commitment, or a host of other flimsy reasons. While I had briefly volunteered with the Hyacinth Foundation in 1995, I hadn't really felt capable of giving back to the community, though I kept it in mind that at some point it would be the next step in my personal growth. Since I had started on 10 years of 12-step recovery, I had made realistic New Year's resolutions for myself. In 1995, it was simply to come out of the closet and let my family know that I am a gay man and in the case of my close friends, confirm what they already knew. For the 1999 resolution, I decided I was ready to give back, and after doing some volunteer work for GAAMC, including a stint as Program Coordinator, I came to The Pride Center and immediately started out as a shift volunteer.

As a PCNJ volunteer, what do you find most rewarding?

I have gotten some valuable experiences in the practice of what corporate America calls networking. For myself, I got the benefit of learning and knowing the perspectives of various segments of our community. Other rewarding instances are being able to tell first-time visitors to the Center that we do have a support/social group that meets their needs. Also, many of our recent and long-term volunteers have come to the Center first as attendees, so I am helping ensure an environment that benefits not only those using the Center but the Center's operations as well.

Tell us about you!

I live in Basking Ridge, NJ, and work at a very supportive telecommunications company as an Administrative Assistant. I earn my keep at home by providing food and shelter for my cats Slick and Spike. I also participate in a GLBT bowling league, and take tae kwon do lessons for physical activity. For the intellectual side of me, I enjoy playing strategy games, researching and collecting popular music from all genres ranging from such artists as R.E.M., Nina Simone, Barbra Streisand, the Moody Blues, Metallica, and ABBA. I also enjoy writing fiction and poetry.

Center Spotlight

Out of the Box

Since November 2002, Out of the Box's (OOTB's) Pandora Scooter and Stephen Jones have dedicated their vivacious energies to hosting open-mic night, a monthly gathering of performers and listeners. Successful and growing, OOTB offers folks of all walks 'n' talks a place to self-express, share poetry, music, dance, comedy, rants, and stories. As Stephen proclaimed, "We welcome all work—original and borrowed—everything and anything people want to share."

The paths of Pandora and Stephen crossed eight months ago, shortly after Dennis McGrath hosted the "1st Trenton Queer Poetry Slam." Pandora, who was already a thriving open-mic performer, wanted a change from chanting her "I'm a DYKE DYKE DYKE!!!" poem in local Barnes and Nobles open-mic nights. "I noticed there were gay and lesbian writers who didn't share their explicitly gay/lesbian writings in these venues, which made me realize that there needed to be a space that's absolutely gay embracing to queer artists and audiences" she said. With the help of Anne Volz and Ellen Gilio, Pandora met Stephen, a singer with a beautiful voice who has felt inspired to perform since his debut as Peter Pan (green tights and all) when he was 10. As it turned out, Stephen had begun launching an open-to-all performance night at PCNJ to depart from restrictive open mics that only permitted poetry or music. Together, the ingenious pair established the Out of the Box open-mic night—an intimate, fun, and friendly place that welcomes all sorts of performers and audiences, especially the GBLTIQ community.

The fruits of their labor are the smiles, smiles, smiles. "When people come up to me afterwards to tell me they are going home to write," reminisced Pandora, "or that they loved the evening and will return next time, I feel we've been successful." The pair value, most significantly, watching people share their work with a mesmerized audience (usually 30-40 folks) that radiates love and respect for anyone who gets up on the mic.

Specifically, Pandora expressed, "I think our world right now is too fast, too furious, and too hyped up. I hunger for a relatively low-tech space in which to connect with other people. Meet folks of like and dislike minds. Talk. Learn. Breathe. This may sound pretty crunchy-granola, but I think it's necessary in this world. To be frank, I'm afraid for our abilities and rights to speak up and speak our minds, so the more places that encourage people to do so, the better."

With such vigor and inspiration, what to-be group leader wouldn't want to seek advice from this successful team? "Be open-minded about everything, flexible to fault, and determined," asserted Stephen. In addition, "you have to be succinct," cautioned Pandora, who had been taken off guard when she learned that some people did not know what an "open-mic event" was. "Oh, don't be afraid to take charge" she added.

For those of you who haven't yet made it out to OOTB, here's how it works. Every 3rd Friday of the month, folks start to show up about 15 minutes before 8PM, savoring the free healthy and not-so-healthy snacks provided. Those who want to share some original or cover work (songs, poems, music, dance, comedy, etc.) sign up on the open-mic list. To break the ice, Pandora usually presents a new poem she's been working on, then introduces the folks from the open-mic list who come up individually and share whatever they brought to share. The open-micers continue to take the stage until about 8:45PM, when the spotlight shines on the featured performer—usually a more established artist. A short intermission follows the feature to give the rest of the night to remaining artists on the list. The evening ends between 10 and 10:30PM, with new friends, old buddies, and mint talents discovered. In August, OOTB will take place at the George Street Playhouse, 9 Livingston Avenue, New Brunswick, NJ.

For more information on Out of the Box open mic night, contact Pandora Scooter (pandorascooter@aol.com) or Stephen Jones (taxi-boy@juno.com).

Guest Editorial

Reality Bites

by Lisa Bennett

I have an idea for a new reality show. Call it “Not Married by America,” and watch what happens when same-sex couples face everyday family challenges, like, say, birth, accidents, and death. It may not be quite as funny as Fox’s new “Married by America,” where Americans get to vote on who should marry whom. But it might be refreshing to see a reality show about something, well, real.

Here’s episode one. Susan and Mary, a happy couple in their 20s, are entertaining their parents at their home in Florida. As they sit down to dinner, Susan announces, “I’m pregnant!” Smiles and tears appear on every face. Then Mary drops the bombshell. “But we have to move to Pennsylvania.” Cut to commercial. Pennsylvania, the women later explain, is the nearest state that will guarantee same-sex couples access to second-parent adoption, or the right of both to be legal parents of the child they will raise together.

Episode two. Joe and Brandon, a 40-something couple, are driving to the supermarket one morning when they pull over to help a stranded motorist on the side of the highway. A passing car hits Joe and he’s rushed to the hospital. Although Joe and Brandon have been together for 14 years, the hospital won’t let Brandon visit Joe, let alone make medical decisions on his behalf. Hospital officials say he is not considered “family.” Instead, they telephone Joe’s parents, to whom he hasn’t spoken in years.

Laughing yet? Wait. Here comes episode three. It’s morning, and Jonathan, age 5, is in his pajamas playing with his mother, Kathy. After a few minutes, she kisses him and says it’s time for her to go to work. “Have fun with Mommy, sweetie,” she says, nodding toward her partner, Sharon, who enters the room. “I’ll see you tonight.” Foreboding music. Later that afternoon, Kathy, who was born with a hole in her heart, has a fatal heart attack. Her son and his stay-at-home mom are left to fend for themselves, without the cushion of even Social Security survivor benefits because Kathy was denied the right to become Jonathan’s legal parent.

OK. Now here comes the fun part. At the end of each episode, the American public can dial in to vote on what might have been a more fair ending, which might be something really surprising like equal rights under law. Polls have shown, after all, that 71 percent of Americans support hospital visitation rights for same-sex couples; 70 percent support employer-sponsored health insurance; 68 percent support Social Security coverage; and (note to network execs) 68 percent of high school seniors support adoption rights.

Or we could avoid putting the country through this whole saga and do something really radical and simply grant all families equal rights under law—by ridding discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity from marriage and adoption laws and bringing equity to retirement, Social Security and tax laws.

Until that day becomes a reality, gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people can take steps to protect themselves with some important legal documents, such as domestic partner agreements, durable powers of attorney, hospital visitation authorizations, last wills and testaments, living wills, and, if appropriate, co-parenting agreements.

None of these documents will provide them with the same rights and responsibilities that the strangers united on “Married by America” will receive when they say, “I do.” But it could help keep their stories from appearing on “Not Married by America.”
